

Blog Submissions

Thank you for your interest in writing a blog post for us.

We are looking for a range of blogs from all sorts of creative experts and business owners to share their own experiences with others. Offline we are building a successful creative community where all members share their experiences and we want to expand that community online with further expertise.

We are looking for blog posts that cover anything to do with running a creative business; starting up, day to day running, marketing, exhibiting, and practical advice too. We are hoping that we gain enough submissions that we can publish these expert blogs every fortnight throughout our website, and they will also be sent out to our ever growing mailing list.

In return for your submission we will promote you through our social media channels and our e-newsletter, so if you have any web or social links please do let us know them when submitting your blog.

We would like a range of visuals to support your post, and these will need to be of a good quality for us to share online. It would also be great if you were available to answer any questions regarding your blog post following its publication.

We reserve the right not to accept every blog that is submitted to us, as we aim to publish a range of subjects, makers and business owners. We also reserve the right to spell and grammar check each submission that we agree to publish and make changes accordingly (to spelling and grammar only.)

If you would like to continue with your submission, please email your post to hello@thecreativebusinessnetwork.com along with supporting visuals and contact details.

We look forward to hearing from you!
